DESCEND INTO DARKNESS

Smartphones today carry an enormous amount of sensitive information. Among this information we find personal, financial data and private conversations; information whose loss would place the phone owner at serious risk of privacy violation. For this reason, it is important to check that everything works correctly from time to time. This is also applicable for know if we have been hacked mobile camera, which we are going to deal with in this article. To do this, we are going to give you a series of tips that you can follow if you suspect that your phone's camera has been compromised in some way. Can the mobile camera be hacked? The short answer is yes, you can. A somewhat more elaborate answer would involve commenting that it is possible if they first install control applications on your phone. That is, anyone who tries to hack your device through the optical sensor needs to have physical access to the device. On the other hand, it is possible that if you have downloaded an APK file from an untrusted repository, be installed malware in your terminal. The same goes for links received by email, or those that can be accessed from social networks. Another possible gateway is the public Wi-Fi networks and Bluetooth hotspots. With this we do not mean that if you have Bluetooth activated, or if you access a public WiFi network this can happen to you, but it is interesting that you know the potential risks. There is no 100% sure way to know if our mobile camera has been hacked, but there are a series of signs that we can pay attention to to get a rough idea. Performance issues The first of these is to observe whether we experience performance issues at the terminal. Generally, a hacked device runs a lot of tasks in the background, which greatly compromises its performance. Very low autonomy Following these background tasks, they connect to the Internet and proceed to send data from the device to the hacker. Consequently, due to the constant exchange of data, a rapid battery discharge. If we see that this happens, it is interesting to enter the application of the energy unit and see which applications are the ones that consume the most, and then uninstall them. Phone overheats This brings us to another point, which is that the constant exchange of data can also cause an excessive phone overheating. This is because, by running so many processes at the same time, the phone's processor is running at full capacity all the time. This causes all terminal circuitry to heat up to dangerous levels. High data consumption Continuing with the constant exchange of information through the Internet, it should be clarified that a sudden spike in mobile data usage it could be another sign that our device is compromised. Unknown apps appear on your phone It is not uncommon for everything we have just told you to be accompanied by apps you don't remember installing (and that you don't know what they are for), which appear as a mushroom on your device and which, generally, have been placed there by hackers to control it remotely. These unknown applications, which are not part of the operating system applications either, could be used to steal your data and send them to third parties. The sound of the phone has interference If your camera has been hacked, it is quite possible that he also gained access to the microphone. The idea is to listen to conversations you are having at any time. If this happens, you may hear unusual background noises while having a phone conversation. My phone is hacked, now what? The most normal thing in these cases is that, if you have managed to identify an application that could be considered malicious, proceed to uninstall it as fast as you can. The normal thing in these cases, and more considering how the launchers current, is to make a long press on the app to uninstall and drag it to one of the corners of the screen. You can also use a batch uninstall app, in case you think there may be several apps that are interfering with your phone. For example, you can use Uninstaller, which you can download below. Developer: SplendApps Price: Free Another thing that can be used to put extra lines of defense is have the operating system updated of your phone, as long as the manufacturer has support for your terminal. If not, you could always consider installing a custom ROM, but that would already be entering a field that is not for all users. Finally, you always have the option of factory data reset of the telephone. In this way, you make sure that the terminal is as when you just bought it. You will lose all your user data, but malicious apps will also be gone. La mobile privacy It is a really important issue and over time it has achieved this importance. Spy movies can be useful to find out if a cell phone is tapped or hacked, information that can be very important for our security and privacy. And it is becoming more and more important in the world of technology. So let's show How to know if your mobile camera has been hacked. Smartphones and internet connection have become more and more advanced and hackers develop more and more malware that are capable of infecting and controlling them and therefore pose an even greater danger. Some are even capable of stealing passwords from social networks. But not only, but also steal bank account passwords. So if you think your phone has been hacked or your calls or messages are being spied on, today we are going to explain what are the signs that confirm if this is really the case. And of course we will also give you some very useful tips to avoid this situation and put effective remedies. Has your mobile been hacked? If you have any suspect that you are being hacked you are in the right place to confirm or not. There are several ways to know if your phone is being hacked, and thus know if your suspicions are real or not. Even so Our recommendation is that you be aware of the indications that we are going to leave you below, also that you carry out the tricks and tips that we are going to explain to you. The best thing to do in these situations is to make sure that they really are spying on all your data, albeit out of fear. First you have to pay attention to situations that are not common within a mobile. They may consider you exaggerated but the truth is that it is the first indication that you can detect and with which you will be able to know if there is someone who has hacked your phone and is collecting all your information. A very common strange behavior in the mobile is that shut down or restart normally without warning, this is already cause for suspicion. Another reason is that applications open automatically without you having touched anything, when it gets very hot or the applications take time to open since this is not normal and they are signs that something is wrong. And we already warned you that if this happens, obviously They also hacked your mobile camera. Considerable decrease in autonomy, a possible option when you notice that the autonomy of your device decreases quickly, it may be due to natural factors such as having the brightness very high or having Bluetooth or GPS activated for a long time as well as playing games for several hours. However, if none of these circumstances occur and the smartphone continues to lose battery faster and faster, it means that something is wrong. Phone overheating, if your phone gets hot without you doing anything with it (without having it in the sun) your device may be infected. When a device performs activities that are in the background without the user knowing it, it is normal for the mobile components to heat up. If the device takes a long time to turn on or off, when contacts disappear from the phonebook and new contacts appear, receive messages from strangers or also that the mobile data runs out faster. Noise or strange sounds during calls It could be one of the clearest signs there is. When you are on a phone call and someone is eavesdropping on the conversations, it is very common for you to hear interference or strange noises. It is not always easy to know 100% if your mobile is really being spied on, but something else can be sensed with these tricks. All these signs suggest that you have an app that has gained access, so your mobile camera has been hacked in complete safety. Be very careful with the information you can get from it. Do you suffer some kind of call forwarding? The MMI code lets you know which location calls are being made from when unanswered. This means that it would be known if someone has phone call forwarding activated on the same smartphone or through another remote way. If you want to know if you have it configured, all you have to do is dial *#62# and you will be able to see if all the calls you make are redirected to another number. If the number does nothing you will have to follow this process: Go into the Phone app. Now go into Settings. Search for call forwarding and there search if there is any number added that is not yours. Another option is within the Phone Settings if you use the word diversion in the search engine. Through the IMEI we can also check if the phone is being hacked. To find out the serial number, you just have to dial *#06# and you will see a long identification number (like a kind of DNI). Sometimes this number also usually appears on the smartphone box, so if you have it on hand, you just have to look on the label, right where the barcode is. If the end of the number appears, when entering it there are 2 zeros at the end, it is possible that someone is listening to all the phone calls. If 3 zeros appear, it means that in addition to listening to conversations they also have access to files, photos, messages and call logs. And finally, another way to tell if someone is listening in on your private conversations is to dial *#21# in the phone app (just like dialing a number to make a call) and then tap the call button. In the set of symbols and letters that appears you will see the status of the connections and thus you will be able to discover if someone is spying on you. How to prevent your mobile camera from being hacked Having the mobile hacked or punctured is not something common. So solving it is not easy either. So if, after following the steps below, you think your smartphone is being hacked, then all you have to do is trust the options we give you, since there is no better solution. There is a code which works through a telephone dialer that interprets all the preferences in the mobile and that the settings that control the calls to other phones and therefore if someone listens to them, the calls are forgotten. To do this you must write the code #002# in the phone app and then press the call button. If it doesn't work, you also have the possibility of contacting the operator to ask them to delete all the forwarding numbers in your phone number. To do this, call your company's customer service number and ask them for this. There is also the possibility of deleting everything you have on your mobile. Although first we recommend you make a backup of all the files you have inside and transfer them to another device while you do this process so as not to lose anything you have saved. Next is the time to follow this procedure: Go into your phone settings. Click on Backup and reset. Look for the option to Erase all data. Once the device reboots again, you will have to set up the entire device with all bypasses and infected apps. Finally, download an antivirus such as Microsoft Defender to avoid possible attacks. And now that you know how to know if your mobile camera has been hacked, you are ready to deal with this problem.
